METROPOLIS
OF CHICAGO

A huge thank you to all who made this year's Greek Festival another huge success! The efforts on everyone's part made it all possible. From those who began meeting and planning in early spring, to the committees who met regularly, as well as all the bakers, cooks, and cleaners, our financial supporters listed on the banners around the grounds, the set up crews, boutique organizers, volunteer coordinators, church tour guides, greeters, the cleanup crew, and those came back Monday morning to help pack up the equipment for next year and scrub the kitchen...and to everyone who helped and/or attended the Festival (we hope we didn't miss anyone!). Be sure to take a look at the photo display on our website: <https://stmarysgoc.org/news-events/>

2027 Winter Icon Class Dates

Icons as a likeness help draw us into relationship with the holy persons depicted, within our Christian journey. This is the icon's primary role. But secondly, through its formal or stylistic qualities, an icon is a spiritual tool transforming the way we see things.

Icons through symbolism indicate divine realities which meet everyone in the place of their journey in Christ. Symbolism is a means of seeing a deeper meaning behind the appearance. It means the gathering together of different levels of meaning to get the essence. The opposite of symbolism, (sym = 'together with') is diabolism (dia = 'dividing against, scattering'). Symbolism is a representation that brings to light a hidden meaning.

For example, every element in an icon brings to light a hidden meaning. The wood, with its linen covering, the egg used to mix the pigments, and the gold, together represent the natural world of matter: vegetable, animal and mineral, which are offered back to God in the work. They also remind us of the passion, death and resurrection of our Divine Lord:

- the wood recalling the suffering on the cross;
- the linen reminding us of the shroud enwrapping His dead body;
- the egg being a symbol of the Resurrection.

Taking an icon class can be a spiritual discipline leading us to an unveiling a wealth of spiritual wisdom.

In the Bookstore

By Rebecca Myerly

Archimandrite Zacharias Zacharou of the Stavropegic Monastery of Saint John the Baptist in Essex, England, has written a new book titled Reflections on Strengthening Family Relationships. Brief yet deep, succinct yet expansive, gentle yet boldly clear—this is a book of great wisdom, insight, discernment, and guidance.

In four short chapters, Father Zacharias offers a perceptive perspective on family relationships of all kinds.

In the first chapter, titled “The Paradoxical Ethos of Humility,” he begins:

It takes many years of study for one to be trained in a profession or to learn a particular art or craft. Yet there is one science to which man must devote himself unceasingly, for it concerns not merely his brief passage through this world but his eternal destiny. This is the science of humility. (9)

This path of humility is not only for the world to come. It is an equally indispensable condition for harmonious life on earth. For how can human beings dwell together—such as a man and woman in the bond of marriage or monks living together in a community—if each person lacks humility and barricades himself within his own will?...

The proud man is full of himself....By contrast, he who labours to learn humility knows how to empty himself, how to prepare a place for the other within his soul....We understand then that humility is the very foundation of all common life. (10)

In the second chapter, “The Holy Competition of Selfless Love,” Father Zacharias shows what humility looks like in a marriage:

The primary purpose of married life is that a man and a woman should labour together towards perfection in God...Each strengthens and completes the other, offering their particular gifts in the service of their common destiny. But they can attain the fulness of perfection only by entering the wondrous communion of the gifts of all the saints. (23)

If husband and wife, strengthened by the blessing of the Church, maintain between themselves a holy competition, each striving to fulfil more perfectly and more readily the will of the other; if they have but one care—to give rest to the soul of the one whom the Providence of God has entrusted to them—then peace and joy will reign in their home. (24)

True love means communion of persons; it is the ability to understand the thought of the other, to perceive his joy or sorrow, to bear his burden and to fulfil his will. (25)

Marriage is, in essence, a school for selfless and humble love, which is the image of divine love itself. (26)

In the third chapter, “Learning to Acquire the Grace of God,” Father Zacharias explains marriage as “a creative task accomplished in prayer and in constant co-operation with God” (31) He writes that children “should not be deprived of the experience of God’s grace, which is transmitted to them through their environment” with the vital reminder that one “can only impart the grace that he himself bears.” (31, 33) He elaborates on this topic:

The upbringing of children depends upon the common life of the parents. Saint Sophrony taught that the purpose of marriage is ‘to not remain within the limits of nature, but to become, in a common effort, a temple for the worship of the Father Who is without beginning.’ Consequently, the chief purpose of marriage is not to have children and worship them as idols. No. The chief purpose of marriage is the common striving to acquire the grace of salvation. (34)

He writes that “the Christian can always, through repentance, improve the world by one man—himself. For when he finds contact with Christ, whether he speaks or remains silent, he transmits Christ to those around him...” (36) This leads to the final brief chapter, “Teaching the Mystery of Confession to Children,” in which Father Zacharias emphasizes the importance of approaching confession as a child, admitting one’s mistakes, and thereby growing in repentance. This brings the reader back to the first chapter, “The Paradoxical Ethos of Humility,” with greater appreciation for the humility and grace unearthed in Reflections on Strengthening Family Relationships.

Above all, that which gives to the soul ‘indescribable joy in God’ is humility. When man embraces and honours this joy, he is made worthy to delight with gratitude in all the joys God offers him through the created world.

—Archimandrite Zacharias Zacharou (24)

Our Children and Youth Mission Statement

To cultivate a safe and welcoming environment for kids by nurturing healthy relationships within the church family. We will teach the youth by building a strong foundation of knowledge, and together, we will experience the Orthodox tradition by following the four circles of youth ministry: Liturgia (Worship), Diakonia (Service), Martyria (Witness), and Koinonia (Fellowship), leading our youth to develop, by their own free will, a personal relationship with God and to pursue union with Him.

After the Divine Liturgy of Sunday August 30, 2026, The Forchas Family shared the following words of gratitude to the congregation after the one-year anniversary of the tragic event at Annunciation School on August 27, 2025.

Dear Saint Mary's Family,

It has been one year since our lives changed forever and we want to take a moment to thank each and every one of you for surrounding our family with love, prayers, and support throughout this unimaginable year.

Thank you for every prayer, every kind word, every gesture of support, and for the incredible monetary generosity shown to our family. There are simply too many people to thank individually, but please know that we felt the love and the support of our entire Saint Mary's family every step of the way.

Our family will never forget the Paraklesis service held just one day after Sophia was injured. At a time when we were told she was not going to survive, in one of the darkest and most terrifying moments of our lives, you gathered together to pray for Sophia. That love, faith, and unwavering support will stay with us forever.

Thank you for embracing our entire family, including Anthony. His experience of that day, and of this past year as a whole, is very different from Sophia's, but in its own way equally horrifying. He too has been on his own journey of healing, and we are so grateful that our entire family has been held so close by this community.

As we move forward, we want to gently remind everyone that it is not over. Healing does not have an expiration date. We are still healing. We are still grieving. We are remembering the precious lives lost and the countless lives changed forever. The anniversary may signify one year but it does not mark the end of the pain, the grief, or the journey ahead. Please continue to pray for the families of Harper Moyski and Fletcher Merkel. Please keep the families forever changed by that day in your prayers. Your ongoing love and prayer mean more to us than we can ever put to words.

From the bottom of our hearts, thank you for carrying us when we did not know how to carry ourselves. We are forever grateful to be a part of this Saint Mary's Community.

With Love and Gratitude,

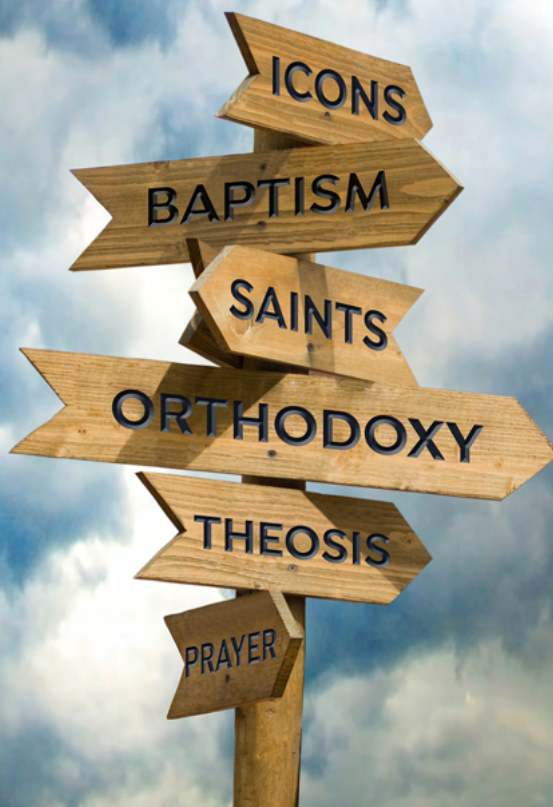

The Forchas Four
